Mr Khan is a Solicitor-Advocate (Higher Rights in Criminal Law) and a fully qualified Criminal Duty Solicitor, which means he is capable of representing his clients from Police Station to the Supreme Court of UK. Furthermore, Mr Khan has done his Bar at Law from Lincolns's Inn. In addition of being an experienced advocate, he is also very proficient with case preparation, case management and case analysis in complex legal matters.

Since joining Lloyds PR Solicitor's Criminal Defence Team he regularly appears at Crown Courts, Magistrates Courts and Police Stations dealing with a wide range of criminal matters including all types of assaults (CA/ABH/GBH), domestic violence, harassment, multi jurisdiction complex fraud conspiracies, cybercrimes, money laundering, slavery, immigration frauds, serious sexual offences, murder, terrorism and illegal drugs related matters.

Mr Khan has experience in dealing with prosecutions under export control licensing regime for strategic goods such as military items and "dual use" items- being goods that, for example, along with civilian use, could also be used in production of weapons and/or Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) programmes. This licensing regime is part of an international framework and is based upon various international agreements, including "Council Regulation (EC) No 428/2009 of 5 May 2009 referred to in the Export Control Order 2008 as the Dual Use Regulation. The UK regime is administered by the Department for International Trade (DIT) formerly, Department for Business Innovation and Skills (BIS).

Mr Khan has a particular interest in international dimension of criminal cases and advises individuals in respect of extradition requests. He has experience of dealing with complex restraint orders and confiscation orders.

His solution oriented strategic approach and quick thinking on his feet has been very valuable to his clients.

In the past Mr Khan has provided extensive legal assistance to various corporate entities, foreign governmental departments and international organizations. He also has experience in mediation, arbitration and immigration laws.

Mr Khan is a fully accredited Police Station Advisor and he likes to take control of his cases at initial police investigation stages. Protecting and advancing clients legal rights at this stage enable them to move in the right direction.

Mr Khan is a qualified Supervisor under Ministry of Justice, Criminal Legal Aid Contract regime.
